Voces y Silencios: Revista Latinoamericana de Educación is an academic, peer-reviewed, electronic publication with a semi-annual frequency and open access. Its focus is the study and dialogue on questions and issues in education, pedagogy, and human development. The journal places emphasis on topics that are of particular interest to education in Latin America, while also welcoming contributions that present and discuss these areas in other parts of the world. It is oriented towards an audience consisting of researchers, teachers, principals, and other professionals who work in education, both in formal educational institutions and in policy-making institutions, non-governmental organizations, and spaces for non-formal and informal education.
